Information Disclosure Statement

In addition to the references submitted, Applicants disclose the following information under 37 C.F.R. § 1.56 as potential prior art.

One type of potential prior art involves information relating to the general structure of the Internet, including existing web browsers, search engines, and the concept of hosting web sites. Examples of existing web browsers include the Netscape Navigator program and the Microsoft Internet Explorer program.

Other types of potentially relevant prior art involving the Internet include the use of Extensible Markup Language (XML) and Extensible Stylesheet Language (XSL).

Another type of potentially relevant prior art is the concept of tracking "clicks" by a user at a particular web site, such as the number of times users "click on" an on-line banner advertisement.

Yet another type of potentially relevant prior art is the concept of web sites having restricted access, based upon user groups, such as a known database including Japanese internment information.
